ALPINE CLUB OF CANADA ENJOYS RECORD MEET

(Upper) Abbot's Pass Hut and Glacier Peak. (Lower) Director Wheeler reading report at the annual meeting. (Insert) Mr. Wheeler, right, congratulating Capt. MacCarthy, who just returned from capturing Mount Logan.

"The camp this year was one of the best climbing camps we ever had," said T. B. Moffatt, regarding the outing of the Alpine Club of Canada, at Lake O'Hara, this summer. The weather was ideal and there was work for all classes to do, hikings to Lakes McArthur and Oesa, and to the Opabin Pass. Then shorter climbs were available for the graduates, such as Shafer and Odaray. The more seasoned climbers had Huber, Victoria, Lefroy and Hunabee.

The high mountains were in a better condition this year than they have ever been before owing to the scarcity of ice. From 50 to 60 members were out every day climbing, the two days' trip over the passes being very popular. Through the courtesy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which placed its hut, situated at the top of the Abbot Pass, at the disposal of the members, the work of climbing was greatly facilitated.

The annual business meeting of the Club was held at Lake O'Hara Camp on August 5th. This was an auspicious occasion, for Captain MacCarthy, leader of the Mount Logan expedition and Henry S. Hall, one of the party, were present. The business of the Club was transacted in the morning at ten o'clock, under the large gully on the shores of Lake O'Hara. No setting for the occasion—that of welcoming Capt. MacCarthy and his party—could have been more appropriate than amid the superb peaks that surround O'Hara. Flags of various nations were strung between the trees of this primeval forest in which the camp was pitched, this being the Club's own property, which Mr. Wheeler, its director, secured as far back as 1907. The scene was a festive one, the whole atmosphere, despite the serenity of these majestic peaks and lake, was one of joviality and every one was in particularly good spirits.

Captain MacCarthy was elected a honorary member of the Club, not wholly on account of the Mount Logan ascent, but on other grounds as well, for he was recognized long before this as an outstanding mountaineer. Votes of thanks were extended to the Canadian Pacific Railway and various departments for the Swiss Guides and the mountain hut at Abbot Pass.

Canada's Wool, Woollen and Knit Goods Industry at the C. N. E.

1. Mrs. Cockshutt, wife of the Lt.-Gov. of Ontario, looking exceedingly smart in an "all-Canadian" costume, in which she attended the opening of the Canadian Woollen Goods exhibit at the C. N. E. The two-piece sports costume is of pansy purple trimmed with grey at the collar, cuffs and pockets, the wool being grown, spun, dyed and knitted in Canada. The ensemble coat is of grey marvella, a magnificent specimen of pile cloth with a silken finish from a Canadian loom. The coat has a straight back with godet front, with a shawl collar and cuffs of grey Canadian baby lamb, lined with grey flat crepe silk produced by the silk industry of Canada. Grey shoes and stockings, and a purple cloche hat, completed the "all-Canadian" costume.

2. Exhibit of Canadian Woollen Knit Goods machinery at the C.N.E.

3. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario opening the exhibit of Canada's Wool, Woollen and Knit Goods Industry at the C. N. E. He is seen wearing a suit of milled worsted made from wool grown on the Alberta ranch of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. Mrs. Cockshutt is looking at the prize bred Canadian lamb presented to her by the officers of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers' Association.

Tens of thousands of people obtained an entirely new idea of the wool growing and wool manufacturing possibilities in Canada at the exhibit of the Wool, Woollen and Knit Goods Industry at the Canadian National Exhibition. The pillars of wool from the nine provinces of Canada supplied by the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers Association excited considerable comment, and emphasised the fact that although we maintain only 2,500,000 sheep and lambs in Canada, the size, feed conditions and climate would permit the keeping of 25,000,000, and that sheep keeping is the most profitable branch of agriculture. Also that of the 70,000,000 lbs. of wool used annually to clothe the population of our country, some 50,000,000 could be grown here instead of only 15,000,000 lbs. as at present. The small factory installed with twenty operatives showed the actual manufacture in Canada of fine woollen and worsted yarns, the weaving of fine blankets, woollen cloth and worsted cloth, and the knitting machines making underwear and hosiery. It was a miniature representation of the work that is being done in over two hundred and seventy woollen and knitting mills in over one hundred and forty municipalities.

The finished goods display, which showed what the completed goods looked like after being made on the machines, showed that in quality and style the $75,000,000 worth of goods produced by the industry annually were equal, and in many cases better, than goods made abroad. It conclusively showed that so far as climatic, physical and technical conditions in Canada are concerned there is no reason why 90% of the woollen and knit goods used in Canada should not be produced in Canada.

MAKING AND CARING FOR CUTTINGS OF TREES AND SHRUBS

(Experimental Farms Note)

Cuttings should be taken from healthy plants and not from parts which give an unhealthy appearance. Cuttings from trees such as willows, Russian and North-western poplars strike root from either old or young wood, while cuttings from most other trees strike root more readily and make better growth when taken from well-matured shoots of the current year.

Cuttings of willow, poplar and Tartarian honeysuckle as well as gooseberries and currants should be taken preferably in the fall; they may, however, be taken in the early spring before the buds burst. Cuttings should be from six to eight inches in length.

A pit dug before freeze-up is a convenient place to store over winter. When boards are placed over the pit the snow is kept out, hereby permitting of early spring planting.

Cuttings should be planted as early in the spring as possible. Planting at an angle of forty-five degrees and allowing one or two buds above ground has been found satisfactory, provided the soil has been well firmed around the cutting. During the planting process, the cuttings should not be allowed to dry out. A simple method of preventing drying-out is to carry cuttings in a pail of water when planting.

A good practice is to set the cuttings in a small plot in the autumn and to transplant to a permanent location the following spring. When this method is followed, the cuttings are set in the small plot in rows eighteen inches apart with six inch spacing in the row.

Helpful suggestions on this subject may be obtained by writing or visiting the nearest Experimental Farm.

A certain school teacher was endeavoring to explain to a small boy in her class the meaning of the word "collision."

"Suppose two boys running in the street should bump together," she said, "what would there be?"

"A fight," responded the little fellow loudly, and with astonishing promptness, and the teacher gave it up.

"SINBAD THE SAILOR"

By Sergt.-Mayor C. N. C. Hayter
Late Royal N.W. Mounted Police

An interesting account of the career of a well educated man, formerly a University Professor, who although possessed of ample private means, deliberately turned "Crook" and embarked upon a series of audacious swindles.

One of the most plausible rogues who ever passed through my hands was "Sinbad the Sailor." He derived his picturesque nickname from the marvellous stories of foreign travel—correct in every detail save the rather necessary one of truth—with which he was wont to regale his prospective victims. He had originally been a Professor of languages at one of the American universities, was a man of good appearance and really charming personality, and why he had elected to "go crook" I do not know, especially as he possessed an adequate private income.

One of "Sinbad's" earliest exploits was at Winnipeg, in Canada, where after less than twenty four hours' acquaintance he induced a wealthy young Scotsman who had just arrived in the city to part with five thousand dollars! The modus operandi was as follows:—

"Sinbad" had a friend in the city, as shady as himself who was running what appeared to be a real estate office. He had well-appointed rooms, a smart stenographer, an imposing brass plate on the door—in fact, all the trappings likely to impress the innocent and unwary. However, victims were apparently rather slow in coming forward, and finally Mr. Real Estate found himself in difficulties. Unless things improved, he would be unable to pay his rent, and would have to go, a prospect which was far from pleasing to him after all the trouble and expense he had gone to in the furnishing of his office.

He had marked down the afore-said Scotsman as a likely lamb to lead to the slaughter, and was contemplating unloading some bogus property on him when he happened to mention his intention to "Sinbad." That astute individual promptly vetoed the scheme, and substituted a much more cunning one of his own.

At that time the Grand Trunk Hotel, the Fort Garry, had just been opened, and to attract custom the management was always ready to show people over the premises—a fact that was destined to help "Sinbad" considerably in the working out of his nefarious plans. The young Scotsman himself, whom we will call Angus, was staying at the C.P.R. hotel, the Royal Alexander. "Sinbad" had the prospective "pigeon" pointed out to him, and next morning strolled into the rotunda of the Royal Alexander and took a seat next to him.

His first act was to call a bell-boy over to him.

"If a Mr. Wilson calls to see me," he said, "bring him in here."

The boy departed with his instructions, and "Sinbad" then proceeded to get into conversation with his neighbour, keeping to safe topics like the weather, the city buildings, and so on. In the midst of it Mr Wilson bustled in.

"Ah, good morning, Morrison," he exclaimed. "I've been looking all over the place for you. What about motoring out and looking over that piece of property this afternoon? I've got another offer for it, but I'd like you to buy it, and I'll give you first chance if you care to come."

"Sinbad" affected to consider.

"Well, it's very inconvenient," he grumbled, "but I'll get on the 'phone and see what I can do. I don't like disappointing you. Wait here; I'll be back in a minute."

He got up to go to the 'phone, and the other, who was of course his friend the "real estate," sank into his vacant chair, and began to talk affably to Angus.

"Known him long?" he asked, with a jerk of his thumb in "Sinbad's" direction.

"No," was the reply. "He seems a pleasant sort of chap."

Came Across Continent in Motor Boat

Completing all but the last lap of their trip from Los Angeles to New York—across the whole continent—in an eighteen foot long motor boat, two Americans, John Edwin Hoag and Frank S. Wilton, not to mention Spy-Wapato, their dog, arrived recently in Montreal and stayed for a day or two before proceeding to New York.

The entire distance was covered by water with the exception of one portage of 400 miles from Celilo Falls, Washington to Fort Benton, Montana. Their boat the "Transcontinental" is an 18-foot craft, 5 feet abeam, and powered with two four horse power Evinrude outboard motors. They left Astoria, Oregon, May 20, after having their boat shipped up the coast from Los Angeles. The route was via the Columbia River from its mouth to Celilo Falls where the boat was loaded into a box car and sent on 400 miles to Fort Benton where the journey was resumed down the Missouri River for 2,280 miles into the Mississippi to St. Louis, then up the Mississippi to the Illinois River as far as Ottawa, Illinois; through the Illinois and Michigan Canal to Joliet, Illinois, and through the Chicago Drainage Canal into Lake Michigan. From here the voyage was plain sailing to Montreal, where they landed at the Canadian Pacific Pier No. 8, having moored their boat alongside the "Montcalm."

Messrs. Hoag and Wilton followed in reverse direction the course of the early explorers, Columbus, Hendryk Hudson, Champlain, Cartier and La Salle. Their mishaps commenced early when, in the Columbia River they ran afoul of a sunken log which tore the stern out of their boat. After this misadventure, which they finally weathered safely, they had comparatively no bad luck, except for the tornadoes, heavy storms and risky runs down little-known rapids, which might naturally be expected.

Their adventure is unique, the only attempt previously made being about 18 years ago when a similar expedition ended at Bismarck, North Dakota, after traversing the same route. Then, however, the adventurers were so held up by adverse conditions that they were overtaken by winter and their boat was crushed in the ice.

WINTERING BEES OUTDOORS (Experimental Farms Note)

To winter bees successfully three things are necessary, (1) strong colonies of young bees, (2) an abundance of wholesome stores and (3) adequate protection. To neglect any one of these is to invite disaster. Weak colonies should be united in the fall. The winter supply of stores should be given not later than the first week in October. The time that protection is given will depend upon the method used.

Outdoor wintering is rapidly gaining in favor, and bees are now being wintered in packing cases where once it was thought they could not survive. Bees may be wintered in single, double or four-colony cases. The latter are more economical as less material is required for each hive. Whichever case is used it should be made large enough to allow four to six inches of insulating material between the hives and wall of case on the bottom and all four sides, and from six to eight inches on top, with at least one inch of air space between top packing and case cover. The colonies should stand close together in the cases with no packing between them. A tunnel must also be provided between the hive entrance and flight hole in the case. Colonies to be wintered outside should be placed in the cases during the latter end of September or early in October and the bottom and side packing given. The hive covers should be removed to allow the hives to come together closely. As soon as the colonies are in the cases, give them all the food they will take down. The feeding should be done as rapidly as possible, and as soon as it is finished a quilt or bag spread over the hives and the top packing put on. These bees will require no further attention until next spring. Outdoor-wintered bees should be protected from prevailing winds by a good wind-break. For full information on the subject write to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture or to the Bee Division, Experimental Farm Ottawa, for free Pamphlet No. 22 on "Wintering Bees in Canada."

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Wainwright Oil and Development Co. is slated to be held on October 10, in the Council Chamber.

He: "Remember, sweetheart, the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."
She: "Then you come right in and rule the world for a while; I'm getting tired of it."

"What are the sins of omission?" asked the vicar, who was examining the Sunday-school class.

"Sins you ought to have committed and haven't," was the prompt response of one of the smaller children.

Who is he?"

The other looked at him in surprise

"What! You don't know?" he exclaimed. "Why, he's the managing director of the Grand Trunk hotel system, a very astute business man, but a very good fellow—in fact, a real white man. You're lucky to have got acquainted with him."

"Is that so?" replied the Scotsman, obviously somewhat impressed by the supposed importance of the man he had been talking to.

At this point "Sinbad" came back from the telephone.

"All right, Wilson," he agreed. "I'll come out with you this afternoon. Now what about a little drink?"

Wilson rose to his feet with a nod, and "Sinbad" turned to Angus. "Will you have one with us, sir?" he asked.

Nothing loth to be included in such distinguished company, the young Scotsman—whose subsequent actions showed he had not a great acquaintance with the world—promptly accepted, and the three of them adjoined to the bar, where "Sinbad" suggested that Wilson should return to lunch with him at the Royal Alexander.

"In fact, I shall be pleased if both of you will honor me," he amended. "Then, Mr. Angus, you can come in the car with us, if you like, when I go to inspect this property. It'll enable you to see the country a bit."

Angus promptly accepted this additional invitation, and on "Sinbad" departing to make arrangements for lunch at the hotel Wilson offered to take the young man to see the sights of the city, thus ensuring that he was not left alone to make possible awkward enquiries about his two associates.

In the meantime "Sinbad" arranged with the manager of the Royal Alexander that his two friends should be shown over the hotel after lunch, and during that meal the fact was elicited from Angus that he was looking for a safe investment.

This was the signal for "Sinbad" to relate some fanciful stories of his early struggles, which had culminated, so he said in his "making good" in the hotel business, but only, as he was careful to impress upon his credulous listener, after having learnt the business thoroughly in a big hotel.

"But I am boring you with these long-winded reminiscences," he concluded, "Come along; we'll start our drive."

They motored some miles out into the country, and "Sinbad" ed over in his mind, as he was meant to do, all that the former had been saying. Out of the corner of his eye "Sinbad" observed his thoughtful expression, and all at once he turned to his confederate.

"When's that hotel at X—going to be sold?" he asked casually, naming a well-known health resort close to Winnipeg.

"Next summer, I believe," was the equally casual reply.

As if struck by a sudden idea, "Sinbad" glanced at Angus.

"What a pity you have no experience, young man," he observed. "If you had it would just suit you—a perfect little gold-mine, if well handled. But you haven't the knowledge of the business, so it's no good talking about it."

The Scotsman fidgeted.

"I suppose," he suggested diffidently, "you couldn't get me a job in one of the Grand Trunk hotels, sir? If so, I might get to know enough about things to buy this hotel when it comes on the market next year."

"Sinbad" exhibited surprise. "That's certainly an idea," he admitted. "Well, if you're really in earnest, I'll think about it."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," he said, suddenly, on the way back. "I think you're a cute young fellow who'll make good, so I'll waive your previous inexperience and put you into the Fort Garry as assistant to Williams, the cashier. Do your best, and don't let me down. I don't want any thanks," he went on, as Angus began to stammer his gratitude; this is a business proposition and I shall expect a bond of, say, five thousand dollars for your good behaviour. By the way, Wilson, you're still agent for the Z—, aren't you?" mentioning a high class Bond Company.

"I am," returned Wilson.

"Very well; get Mr. Angus fixed up at ten o'clock to-morrow morning, and then I'll take him round and introduce him to Williams, and he can start work right away. That's all right, Angus; I tell you I don't want any thanks."

They spent the evening together and finally Angus was put to bed in a condition which, to say the least, was likely to render his critical faculties somewhat dormant. However, at ten o'clock next morning he duly deposited himself at Wilson's office.

Here everything went without a hitch until Wilson asked him for his cheque, when the youngster somewhat shamefacedly explained that he had not yet opened a bank account in Canada, but that he had a large letter of credit on the Bank of Montreal, and could produce the cash at once.

This rather nonplussed Wilson who was of course fearful of anything that might provoke inquiries as to what purpose the money was required for. He therefore rang up "Sinbad," who came along to the office at once. On hearing the difficulty, he laughed genially.

"I'll give you my cheque, Wilson," he said, "and the cash can be deposited with me until our young friend here opens his own bank account, and can give you a cheque of his own. "That satisfactory?"

"Quite," the other agreed.

"Sinbad" then proceeded to the bank with Angus—no doubt to do any talking required—the money was handed over, and they returned to the office, where a most imposing bond was drawn up and signed. Then "Sinbad" conducted Angus to the Fort Garry Hotel.

"This, Mr. Williams, is the young man I spoke to you about," he said. The busy cashier glanced up.

"Right," he snapped to Angus; "come round at ten to-morrow." At once "Sinbad" hurried the young Scotsman away. They had a drink to the success of the venture, and once more Angus spent the rest of the day in company of one or both of his new friends. He went back to his hotel that night with his head full of the golden future that lay before him, and at the appointed hour next morning presented himself to the cashier at the Fort Garry. Then came a rude awakening.

When he stated his errand Williams stared at him in mystifica-tion.

"What on earth are you talking about?" he cried. "That man you were with has nothing to do with the Grand Trunk hotels. He told me you wanted to see me about a car I have for sale. Assistant cashier—I don't want an assistant cashier!"

Then the whole story came out, but by this time "Sinbad" and his friend were far from the city—and so were Angus's five thousand dollars. "Sinbad's" foot was well set on the road which was to lead him, after initial and illusory successes, to incarceration behind the grim walls of Stillwater Penitentiary.

Canada at length became too hot for him and he migrated to Chicago, where he rented an office and large warehouse, and commenced another clever swindle. He advertised for farmers to send him a bushel of wheat in connection with a great competition, offering prizes of five thousand, three thousand and fifteen hundred, and five hundred dollars respectively for the samples adjudged the best. Farmers all over the country "fell for it," and he collected something (Continued on page five) like fifty thousand bushels of the finest-quality wheat, which he promptly sold in various lots to the elevator companies.

Wheat at this time was standing at 75 cents, so 'Sinbad' must have netted quite a good harvest. Unfortunately for him, however, he did not deem it necessary to clear out of the city at the conclusion of his deals, thinking that he had safely covered his tracks, and elected to stay where he was. The result was that one of his clients, happening to visit Chicago, bethought himself of calling on "Sinbad" to see how near his bushel of wheat had come to obtaining the first prize. He found office and warehouse closed, and smelling a rat, communicated with the police. "Sinbad" was arrested, tried, and sentenced to an "indeterminate" sentence of from one to five years. He was sent to Joliet prison, got mixed up in a fracas there, and was transferred to Stillwater, where I was Chief Officer, to serve the full term. It was thus that I became aware of the extraordinary fascination of the man, for fascinating he undoubtedly was.

One would have thought that this dose of imprisonment would for the future, especially since, as I have already stated, he was possessed of ample private means.

Three days after his release he was at Minneapolis Garden City on the hunt for fresh victims, and in Minneapolis, posing as a French Count, a character he was well fitted to sustain—he took a regal suite of rooms at the best hotel, and like some aristocratic spider in a gilded web sat down to await the arrival of unwary flies. On one especially he soon cast his eye.

In the town at the time was a young millionaire, whom we will call Rogers, whose reckless and profligate mode of living made him a byword among his quieter neighbours. A favourite amusement of this foolish young man was to buy an estate one day and give it away the next. He also had a habit of periodically getting tired of the city and his usual round of champagne orgies, and disappearing into the country for a couple of weeks, leaving no word of where he was going.

Such a man was an extremely likely victim so far as "Sinbad" was concerned. He quickly contrived to get in touch with Rogers, became his boon companion, and finally went to live with him in the magnificent house which the millionaire had just bought on the shores of Lake Minnetonka, just outside the town.

Here, for a fortnight, they had a hectic time until, as was his wont, Rogers suddenly wearied of it all, and went off on one of his recuperative jaunts to the country, asking the "Count" as a special favour, to remain in residence until he came back. "Sinbad" graciously consented—and then things began to move!

To begin with, "Sinbad" had recognized in Roger's butler an old acquaintance. He had been, as a matter of fact, a fellow-con-vict of his in Joliet. Directly Rogers had gone these crooks put their heads together, the upshot being the cashing of a cheque in Rogers's name for twenty-five thousand dollars.

Their next step was an even more ambitious one. The 'Count' produced a deed of gift, duly witnessed by the butler and a footman who had been admitted to the conspiracy, and sold the whole estate—house and furniture, stock, and barrel—for a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. In view of Rogers's past eccentricities, there was no suspicion aroused that the place was not "Sinbad's" to sell, and as a matter of fact there was a keen competition for its purchase. Then the precious trio flitted while the going was good.

They were only just in time! Five days after leaving home, Rogers ran short of money and telephoned to his bank for more. To his amazement he learnt that the account was overdrawn, and was informed of the presentation of the twenty five thousand dollar cheque. He came back hot-foot to find his property in the possession of others, and no sign of his aristocratic friend the 'Count' who with his butler and footman, had, like the proverbial Arab, folded their tents and stole silently away.

"Sinbad" was the only one of the precious trio to be caught, and that only by chance. He got clear away to New York, where he had to wait a week for a steamer to Europe. There was of course, a warrant out for his arrest, but he got safely on board, and everything seemed to be going well for him when that fickle jade, luck, deserted him.

Unknown to him two Chicago detectives had brought on board a man who was being deported. One of them knew the chief first-class steward, and having handed over their prisoner, they were proceeding to the stewards' quarters in search of refreshment when in an alleyway, they came face to face with the last man they expected to see.

"Why, it's 'Sinbad'!" one of them exclaimed—and promptly arrested him.

He came back to us at Stillwater with a little ticket entitling him to ten years' board and lodging, but he was quite philosophical about it.

"I went for a good stake, sir," he told me, "and just missed it. Another opportunity will no doubt occur."

Ambling Along With the Trail Riders

(1) Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance. (2) Lunch on the Wolverine Plateau. (3) One of the Guides. (4) On the Wolverine Plateau with Tumbling Glacier in the background. (5) Chief Louis Arbel with his Kootenay Indians.

The Official Ride of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, commenced this year on the morning of August 8th and ended at Wapta Camp on the night of the tenth. Over a hundred members participated. They rode across country between Marble Canyon, on the Banff-Windermere Highway, to the Bungalow Camp at Lake Wapta.

The Riders, among them a number of prominent society people, scientists and artists, all travelling on horse-back, blazed a new passage across the Wolverine Plateau. Six countries were represented: Canada, the United States, Australia, France, the West Indies and England. The artists, of whom there were six, made sketches of the virgin scenery along the route of the newly discovered trail.

Seven Indians were in the party, six being Kootenays under Chief Louis Arbel, while the seventh was Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance who gave a lecture on the Indian Races of Canada to the Canadian Club of Montreal during the winter, and is rapidly becoming famous as an authority upon Indian affairs.

The artists included Leonard Richmond, R.B.A., and A. L. Leighton of England; Carl Rungius, Belmore Browne and Richard M. Kimbel, of New York, and R. Palenske of Chicago. Paris was represented by the Duc de Nemours, who recently purchased a ranch near Calgary.

This was the second annual Ride and Pow-wow of the organization. On the morning of August the eighth, motor cars conveyed the Riders from Lake Louise and Banff to the point of departure on the Banff-Windermere Highway. There guides and horses were in readiness and the party immediately mounted and the Ride commenced. The trail led up Tumbling Creek, past Tumbling Glacier and on the Wolverine Plateau where lunch was 'served'. The ride then proceeded along the Plateau with the Wolverine Palisades, Mount Helmet and the Washmawapta Icefield and Waterfalls on the left, giving the riders a view of the Ten Peaks on the right.

That night camp was pitched on the Goodsir Plateau and before retiring the campers gathered around the fire for the usual sing-song, in the shadow of the cliff which rises sheer six thousand, five hundred feet above its valley.

On the second day the ride led down to Goodsir Creek and up McArthur Creek, past Lake McArthur. That night was spent of the shores of Lake O'Hara, the camp there being placed at the disposal of the Trail Riders by the Alpine Club of Canada. The day ended again with a sing-song.

On the third day, August 10th, the final ride was made from Lake O'Hara to Wapta Lake, where the expedition was concluded with a Pow-wow, sing-song and pale-face dance at Tipi Camp. It is expected that another ride of a similar nature will take place next year as the undertaking impressed those who took part as one of the most enjoyable outings they have experienced. Not only does the Ride provide an uncommonly pleasant holiday for sportsmen from Canada and the United States, but it also serves the excellent purpose of making the scenery and the fishing and hunting facilities of the Rockies known abroad.

HOLIDAYS OVERSEAS ATTRACT MANY CANADIANS

CHRISTMAS at home has a charm for the average Briton that is not to be denied, for nowhere in the world is there a greater observance of the old Yuletide customs than that which prevails in the British Isles. Friends and relatives of those who have come to this country to make their home in the new Dominion, look forward every year to the coming of the winter season, knowing that this is the time when the people of Western Canada have the time at their disposal for lengthy holidays necessary to enjoy ocean travel.

This year passenger travel to Great Britain and to other continental countries, promises to be heavier than for many years, according to officials of the Canadian National Railways in Western Canada, who state the preliminary inquiries already received indicate that more people are figuring on holidays abroad during the coming winter than for some time. Accordingly, officials of the National System are now making their plans for the handling of such business and the provision of Canadian National service between Western Canada and the Atlantic seaboard for the convenience of those who plan overseas trips. Canadian National agents at all points will again ticket passengers on all steamship lines, and, as the traffic warrants, special trains carrying both day coaches and sleeping cars will be operated from various western points direct to the boats' side at Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and other ports.

The charm of English scenery, coupled with that of old associations, draws just as strongly today as ever, and to many a Western Canadian, these winter holidays give the one opportunity of visiting the old homeland scenes and mingling again with childhood friends and with those members of the family left behind when he or she sailed for Canada to find a home in the new Dominion.

Rates and dates of sailings and special trains will shortly be announced by the Canadian National Railways.

WOULD CAMP IN TONQUIN VALLEY

That the Tonquin Valley district of Jasper National Park offers one of the best climbing fields of the entire Canadian Rockies, where experienced climbers will find many splendid peaks worthy of their best efforts, was the statement made to members of the Winnipeg section of the Alpine Club of Canada at a recent meeting by Dr. J. W. A. Hickson, of Montreal, president of the Club. Dr. Hickson spoke on the 1925 camp in the southern Rockies and urged that the 1926 annual camp be held in the Tonquin Valley. There, he said, the members of the club would find such peaks as Redoubt, Barbican Turret and Geikie awaiting the hardened climbers, and there also were many unclimbed peaks awaiting conquerors. At the same time, there were many fairly easy peaks which could be used for graduating climbs. The Tonquin Valley, he explained, was easily reached from the Canadian railway station at Jasper in a one-day journey and on arrival there the members would find one of the best, if not the best, climbing field in the entire Canadian Rockies.
